The family calls at 7pm. Who picks up wins the move-in.

the whole pitch, in one ring ↙

A three-email sequence for the VerbaCall team.

Hey James,

What stopped me was where VerbaCall started: it was built to fix call handling in senior care before it went anywhere else. That's not a feature. That's the reason an Executive Director should trust you over a generic AI receptionist.

3 emails. no jargon.

Picture that Executive Director on a Tuesday. The concierge quit, the sales director is on a tour, and three vendors have emailed about "AI for senior living" this week. She doesn't need AI. She needs the phone answered when a daughter calls about her mom.

So I wrote the three emails I'd send for you, and why each one is built the way it is.

Ayush
Founder, Animohub Studio

What's inside

3 emails, 7 days
Day 0, day 3 and day 7, all in one thread.

Opens on a hiring post
A community hiring a front desk concierge, again.

Executive Directors
At US senior living communities, plus their sales directors.

Not every community. The ones with an empty front desk.

the seat nobody budgets for

The Executive Director runs the community, with the Sales Director beside her. They feel it most when the front desk turns over.

What they'd say, in their own words

The desk keeps emptying	Concierge and receptionist roles turn over, and nobody covers the phone in between.
Families call after work	The search starts in the evening, right when the office line goes to voicemail.
Leads go cold by morning	By the time someone calls back, the family has a tour booked somewhere else.

Who goes on the list this week

Hiring a front desk role
Concierge or receptionist posts on Indeed and their careers page.

A new community opening
Lease-up means every inquiry call counts.

Reviews about the phone
Google reviews that mention nobody answering.

Paying for inquiries
Google or Meta ads driving families to call.

What each email does

Email 1 · Day 0

Open on the empty desk
The hiring post, the call that slips, a 2-minute sample call.

Email 2 · Day 3

The after-hours angle
Families call at night. A free trial on that line.

Email 3 · Day 7

Call your own line
A test they run themselves, for a one-word reply.

we'd build it with you

One thing worth fixing

No named community with a before and after is public yet. One move-in story with a number would beat anything we can write.

The three emails.

Written as you, to a sample buyer. Highlighted parts change for every lead.

Email 1 · Day 0 — to a sample buyer (illustrative)

Subject: oakview front desk

Hi Linda,

Saw Oakview is hiring a front desk concierge again.

When that seat is empty, the calls that slip are usually adult children ringing after work about a parent, and they just call the next community on their list.

VerbaCall answers every call, day or night, handles the pricing and care questions, and books the tour into your sales director's calendar.

Worth a 2-minute sample call to hear how it sounds for Oakview?

James

Why it works: it opens on their hiring post, puts the cost in the family's terms, and asks for something tiny.

Email 2 · Day 3, same thread — illustrative

Linda, one more thought.

Families tend to start this search in the evening, after work, which is exactly when the office line goes to voicemail. By morning, the family that left a message may have toured somewhere else.

VerbaCall picks up those calls in your community's voice, then hands your team a qualified lead with notes before the tour.

Happy to set up a free trial on your after-hours line.

James

Why it works: a new angle (after hours), a concrete hand-off to their team, and a next step with no risk.

Email 3 · Day 7, same thread — illustrative

Last note, Linda.

If Oakview has the phones covered, ignore me. If not, try this: call your own main line at 7pm tonight and listen to what a family hears.

If it's voicemail, reply "test" and I'll set up a sample so you can hear the difference.

James

Why it works: it turns the pitch into a test they run themselves, on their own phone line.

Per lead, your list needs: first name, community name, and the front desk role being hired. Linda and Oakview are made up.

Now picture it running.

A few weeks in, Executive Directors reply "test", hear their own voicemail, and book a demo with you.

30,000

Cold emails

To 15,000 buyers, two each on average.

4

Signals, 4 campaigns

Front desk hires, openings, reviews, ad spend.

0

Risk to verbacall.com

Separate domains, warmed and rotated.

20 qualified demos in the next 50 days. Guaranteed.

We agree what "qualified" means first: your definition, not ours. Fall short by day 50, and we keep going the next month at half the fee.

Days 1–14: build
Lists, inboxes, copy you approve

Days 15–24: test
Small batches per signal, learn fast

Days 25–50: scale
More of whatever's working

Book a 30-minute call.

Pick a time
Whatever suits you

30 min on Google Meet
No slides, promise

Leave with the campaign
Yours to keep

Book your growth call →

On the call: the full campaign, the variants we'd test against this one, plus 25 real communities showing a signal this week.
cal.com/animo-hub-xcswxx/quick-strategy-call

Outbound systems for 23+ B2B AI and SaaS companies. Rise Labs added $8K in new MRR in two months. Levare Digital signed 13 clients.

P.S. Tonight a daughter will call three communities about her mom. One of them will pick up. Let's make sure it's a VerbaCall customer.